CERTIFICATE OF CONFORMANCE

The Rigid Lock QuickBerm® (XT) is a patented design that was first developed circa 2011 as the first foldable, portable spill containment product on the market that did not have an interior or exterior portion of the side brace that took up floor space or external support legs causing trip hazards. The design was put through a Justrite Safety Group standard product testing regimen that includes, but not limited, simulated conditions for vehicle traffic during entry/exit, folding/deployment operations, and full fluid fill testing to ensure fluid capture in the event of an emergency spill occurrence. In addition, the materials used in the manufacture of this product were internally tested to verify puncture, tensile and adhesion over and above what is required for the product application. Performance testing during the Research and Development phase as well as a Quality Assurance Manual that ensures a repetitive manufacturing process, has enabled Justrite Safety Group to provide this product line to the US military and commercial oil and gas market for over 10 years without a manufacturer's warranty issue for material or assembly defect over the life of the product line. Justrite Safety Group certifies the design conforms as a Portable Spill Containment device.

This is to certify that the parts/items/material identified above conform to all applicable drawings and/or specifications as evidenced by reports or other documentation on file and that all other purchase order and quality requirements have been met.

Since Justrite Safety Group has no control over how our units are actually used or what substances may be involved, Justrite Safety Group assumes no liability or responsibility for premature failure resulting from improper use of our products. No performance warranty is intended or implied.
